

D.J. Demers

As seen on “The Tonight Show with Jimmy Fallon,” “America’s Got Talent,” “Conan” (three times) and his one-hour specials “[Indistinct Chatter],” “Interpreted,” and “Born In ‘86,” D.J. Demers is a steady provider of laughs. His clever stand-up is both personal and universal and has earned him multiple appearances at Just For Laughs, a nomination for Best Comedy Album at the Junos (i.e. the Canadian Grammys), and a growing legion of fans around the world.

Before moving to America, D.J. achieved tremendous success in Canada. In 2015, he was awarded Best Breakout Artist at the Canadian Comedy Awards. He won the Homegrown Comics Competition at the 2014 Montréal Just For Laughs Comedy Festival, won the 2013 Toronto Comedy Brawl, and was a 2011 finalist on NBC’s Stand-Up for Diversity.

All three of his stand-up albums have been played millions of times on all major streaming platforms, including Pandora, Spotify, and SiriusXM. His appearances on Fallon, AGT, and Conan have garnered tens of millions of views on Instagram, YouTube and TikTok.

D.J. now lives in Los Angeles. He performs at the major clubs in L.A. and regularly tours clubs, colleges, and corporate events across North America. To stay up to date on D.J.’s latest projects and tour dates, please sign up for his newsletter and watch or listen to his podcast, Definitely D.J.
